Professors of future

The Future Faculty Program helps graduate students develop and document their teaching skills in preparation for a faculty career. Every year, department of physics provides an opportunity for post graduate students to take theory classes for graduate students on a particular day as a part of the program called “Professors of future”. The Professors of future Program assists post graduate students in developing teaching skills and exploring the faculty role at the college or university level.

The program provides a wider range of educational experiences to students. Students will get the real time class room experience through this program. On 27 February 2019, as a part of science week celebrations, we conducted the program “Professors of future”. Post graduate students of physics department took classes for first DC and third DC students.
